PAVAGADH

Pavagadh is the gateway to Panchmahal. The locations of hilly areas around Halol provide good scenery. Pavagadh Hill has total height of 822 meters and you can find many scenic trails to climb including waterfalls during monsoon time.

The summit of Pavagadh Hill in Panchmahal district has a Hindu goddess temple complex and pilgrim centre within the Champaner-Pavagadh Archaeological Park. It dates from the 10th or 11th centuries. The temple has three images of goddesses: the central image is of Kalika Mata, flanked by Kali on the right and Bahucharamata on the left. On Chaitra Sud 8, a fair is held at the temple which is attended by thousands of devotees. The temple is the site of one of the Great holy Shakti Peethas. One can reach easily to temple by ropeway.

The site is 50 kilometres east of Baroda and 68 kilometres south of Godhra, whose history is recorded from the 2nd century AD and which has many religious monuments of Gujarati Sultans (of Turkish descent), Rajputs, and Jains. The setting is undulating hillocks and plateaus. There are steep rock exposures formed by ancient volcanic eruptions and lava flows.

Addition to this, the great music maestro of 16th century and Tansen's contemporary rival, Baiju Bawra belonged to Champaner.

CHAMPANER

It is said that the king Vanraj Chavda established Champaner at the foot of Pavagadh in fond memory of his wise minister Champa. Later, the Patai Raval family ruled it and took care of the boundary. After that the area served as the capital for Mahmud Begada, the emperor of Gujarat.

Mahmud Begada was so much enchanted by the natural beauty of the vicinity that he shifted his capital from Ahmedabad to Champaner. He developed the town by constructing buildings such as the Fort of Champaner, Uohra Mosque, Mandavi Kirtistambh, Temple of Shalkh, Jama Masjid, Nagina Mosque and Kevda Mosque. The remains of the Palace of Begada are still found near Vad Talav (Banyan Pond) two kilometers (1.25 miles) away from Champaner.

There are several other sites which include: Kabutarkhana, Maqbara, Maqbara Mandvi, Maqbara near Patidar Village, Malik Sandal Ni Vav, Hathikhana, Sindh Mata, Sikander Ka Reuza, Babakhan Ki Dargah, Nau Kuan Sat Vavdi, and Chandrakala Vav.
